@KassandraSeven @DrJohnFrancis Yes completely agreed. The problem with disinformation isn't that the information is false in a way we don't agree with. It is the sociological impacts that occur from collective detachment and canalization into motivated and hyperreal belief systems. There's no good propaganda.

IN BRIEF

Misinfo

Misinformation thrives on social media where anyone can share almost anything they choose, and attention spans are short. Here's a quick guide to help you understand what misinformation is and how to recognize it.

Why do people share misinformation?

Many people share misinformation unknowingly and sometimes with good or altruistic intentions — whether to articulate their perspectives, warn others away from danger or join others in trying to make sense of the world around them.

But some research suggests that some people also knowingly share things they suspect are false — whether to damage “the other side” in a political debate, get social media likes and shares, or conform to their ideological identities.

Abstract

Scholars, policy makers, and the general public have growing concern about the possibility of large-scale violence in the United States. These worries find support revealing that many American partisans support the against rival partisans. Here we propose that support violence is based in part on greatly exaggerated perceptions of partisans' support for violence. We also predict that inaccurate "metaperceptions" can reduce partisans' partisan violence. We test these hypotheses in a series of registered, nationally representative, correlational, and experimental studies (total $n = 4,741$), collected both after the 2020 U.S. Presidential election and the 2021 January 6th attack. In Studies 1 and 2 we found that both Democrats' and Republicans' perceptions of their rival partisans' support for violence and willingness to engage in violence were inflated, with estimates ranging from 239% to 489% higher than actual support. Further, we find that a brief, informational correction of these misperceptions reduced support for violence by 37% and willingness to engage in violence by 44% (Study 4). In a third study, a follow-up survey revealed the correction continued to significantly reduce support for violence approximately 6 months following the study. Together, these results suggest

The Security Dilemma Ethnic Conflict

Bar

The end of the Cold War has been accompanied by the nationalist, ethnic and religious conflict in Eurasia. However, the frequency and intensity of these conflicts have varied from region to region. Ukrainians and Russians are still getting along relatively well; Czechs and Slovenians had a short, sharp clash; Serbs, Croats and Bosnians have waged open warfare; and Armenians and Azerbaijanis are destined to fight a slow-motion attrition war. The claim that the released, age-old antipathies account for this violence fails to explain the considerable variance in observable intergroup relations.

The purpose of this article is to apply a basic concept from the tradition of international relations theory, 'the security dilemma', to the special conditions that arise when proximate groups suddenly find themselves newly responsible for their own security. A group suddenly compelled to provide its own protection asks the following questions about any neighbouring group: is it a threat? How much of a threat? Will the threat grow or diminish over time? What, if anything, that must be done immediately? The answers to these questions strongly influence the chances for war.

This article assesses the factors that could produce an international security dilemma when imperial order breaks down, thus producing a vacuum that may lead to resort to violence. The security dilemma is then employed to analyse two cases – the break-up of Yugoslavia and relations between Russia and Ukraine – to illustrate its utility. Finally, some

The Origins and Management of Ethnic Conflict

David A. Lake
Donald Rothchild

Since the end of the Cold War, a wave of ethnic conflict has swept across parts of Eastern Europe, the former Soviet Union, and Africa. Localities, states, and sometimes entire regions have been engulfed in convulsive fits of ethnic insecurity, violence, and genocide. Early optimism that the end of the Cold War might usher in a new world order has been quickly shattered. Before the threat of nuclear war could fully fade, new threats of state meltdown and ethnic cleavages have rippled across the international community.

The most widely discussed explanations of ethnic conflict are, at best, incomplete and, at worst, simply wrong. Ethnic conflict is not caused by ancient inter-group differences, "ancient hatreds" and centuries-old feuds, or the stresses of modern life within a global economy. Nor were ethnic passions bottled up by repressive communist regimes, simply uncorked by the end of the Cold War.

We argue instead that intense ethnic conflict is most often caused by collective fears of the future. As groups begin to fear for their safety, dangerous, difficult-to-resolve strategic dilemmas arise that contain within them the potential for tremendous violence. As information failures, problems of commitment, and the security dilemma take hold, groups become more aggressive, the state weakens, and conflict becomes more likely. Ethnic actors, political entrepreneurs, operating within groups, build upon these fears, insecurity and polarize society. Political memories and emotions also feed these anxieties, driving groups further apart. Together, these between-

Regardless, it is also, humiliatingly, true that for a brief period in the early 2000's I became obsessed with 9/11 trutherism <scream emoji>. I knew most of it was bullshit but I could not help but do my own research because as a new father at the time I simply could not fathom what had happened on American soil. They got to me through 'science' and my own fear center.

In real life, I am a hardcore skeptic, atheist, and I detest anything that smells of woo. But for a minute, almost 20 years ago I wasn't completely in this reality and that scared the shit out of me. It also made me hate disinformation in all forms and the structures that distribute it.

I've sent various versions of this out to people who wanted to stir up some shit and get a reaction.

I got absolutely roasted on a well-regarded subreddit for bringing up Russia up at all. And a group of Qanon researchers responded in a decidedly unhelpful way after I approached them.

@KassandraSeven I learned this in my first jobs in policy in DC. People say a thing is true, out a footnote on it, and list a source. Very few people go to the source to see if it says that. (Even more so back then, given a few years before internet popularity) You find a lot when you do.

Why do people share misinformation?

Many people share misinformation unknowingly and sometimes with good or altruistic intentions — whether to articulate their perspectives, warn others away from danger or join others in trying to make sense of the world around them.

But some research suggests that some people also knowingly share things they suspect are false — whether to damage “the other side” in a political debate, get social media likes and shares, or conform to their ideological identities.

Bad actors — such as hyperpartisans, trolls and even foreign agents — create and share disinformation to cause division and confusion, to promote political interests and points of view or for financial gain.

IN BRIEF

Misinfo

Misinformation thrives on social media where anyone can share almost anything they choose, and attention spans are short. Here's a quick guide to help you understand what misinformation is and how to recognize it.

Why do people share misinformation?

Many people share misinformation unknowingly and sometimes with good or altruistic intentions — whether to articulate their perspectives, warn others away from danger or join others in trying to make sense of the world around them.

But some research suggests that some people also knowingly share things they suspect are false — whether to damage “the other side” in a political debate, get social media likes and shares, or conform to their ideological identities.

What I'm trying to say is there is way too much waving around of the constitution in my community and not enough reading it. Moms for "Liberty" - who also tried and failed TWICE to have me charged - take note. Trying to jail someone for their speech is the opposite of liberty.

Number of observations	27,874	27,874	27,874
Number of households	11,937	11,937	11,937

Notes: This table shows odds ratio estimates for the effect of living in a household infected with the Omicron VOC relative to the Delta VOC. Column 1 shows the relative transmission of the Omicron VOC, conditional on being unvaccinated. Column 2 shows the relative transmission of the Omicron VOC, conditional on being fully vaccinated. Column 3 shows the relative transmission of the Omicron VOC, conditional on being booster-vaccinated. Note, all estimates are from the same model, but with a different reference category across column 1-3. The estimates are adjusted for age and sex of the primary case, age and sex of the potential secondary case, and size of the household. The estimates are furthermore adjusted for vaccine status of the potential secondary case interacted with the household variant, and the vaccine status of the primary case. 95% confidence intervals are shown in parentheses. Standard errors are clustered on the household level. The odds ratio estimates for the full model are presented in Appendix Table 8, column I.

Overall, our findings confirm that the rapid spread of Omicron can primarily be ascribed to the immune evasiveness rather than an inherent increase in the basic transmissibility. 2/N

We identify primary cases 9-12 December 2021. This gives us 11,937 households (2,225 with Omicron) living with 27,874 potential secondary cases. We identified 6,397 positive secondary cases during a 1-7 day follow-up period. 3/N

We found an overall secondary attack rate (SAR) of 31% in households infected with Omicron and 21% in households infected with Delta (Figure 1,b). 4/N

Notes: Panel (a) shows the probability of potential secondary cases being tested after a primary case has been identified within the household. Panel (b) shows the probability of potential secondary cases that test positive subsequently to a primary case being identified within the household. Note that the latter is not conditional on being tested, i.e. the denominator contains test negative individuals and untested individuals. The x axes shows the days since the primary case tested positive, and the y axes shows the proportion of individuals either being tested (a) or testing positive (b) with either antigen or RT-PCR tests, based on the variant of the primary case. The SAR for each day relative to the primary case can be read directly from panel (b). For example, the SAR on day 7 is 31% and 21%, whereas the SAR on day 4 is 24% and 15%. The shaded areas show the 95% confidence bands clustered on the household level. See appendix Figure 5 for the same two panels, only using RT-PCR tests.

The Memorial Site is closed o

At the Buchenwald Memorial, the permanent exhibition "Buchenwald. Exclusion and Violence 1937 to 1945" in the former chamber building as well as the exhibition "Soviet Special Camp No. 2 1945 to 1950" is open to visitors again.

However, due to their small size, other exhibitions and individual buildings must remain closed or, like the former crematorium, can only be visited as part of a guided tour.

Tickets

Access to the museums is strictly limited in relation to the size of the room. The permanent exhibition on the history of the Buchenwald concentration camp can only be visited with a pre-booked ticket for a certain time slot:

reservierung.buchenwald.de

Please remember that from November 19, 2021, entry into the exhibitions will be subject to the "2G rule"

(vaccinated, recovered). We kindly ask you to present official proof when entering the exhibition building

- that you were fully vaccinated (the second vaccination must have been at least 14 days ago) or
- about your recovery (valid for up to 6 months after a positive test result).

For school children and adolescents up to the age of 18, a certificate from the school about a negative result of an antigen rapid test is sufficient, provided that the test is not older than 24 hours.

Denying the need for public health measures, including vaccination, is tantamount to tacitly accepting that the virus will carry off people from all communities, in the same way that 19th-century Germans accepted that cholera would carry off the rich and the poor. American coronavirus skeptics claim that there's no need for fear, that the whole thing is just a hoax, while the virus kills their loved ones.

The First Amendment (@USConst_Amend_I)

For a one-page explainer of exceptions and false speech (from a Supreme Court decision):

Opinion of KENNEDY, J.

at 7). Instead, content-based restrictions on speech have been permitted, as a general matter, only when confined to the few “historic and traditional categories [of expression] long familiar to the bar,” Id., at ____ (slip op., at 5) (quoting Simon & Schuster, Inc. v. Members of N. Y. State Crime Victims Bd., 502 U. S. 105, 127 (1991) (KENNEDY, J., concurring in judgment)). Among these categories are advocacy intended, and likely, to incite imminent lawless action, see Brandenburg v. Ohio, 395 U. S. 444 (1969) (per curiam); obscenity, see, e.g., Miller v. California, 413 U. S. 15 (1973); defamation, see, e.g., New York Times Co. v. Sullivan, 376 U. S. 254 (1964) (providing substantial protection for speech about public figures); Gertz v. Robert Welch, Inc., 418 U. S. 323 (1974) (imposing some limits on liability for defaming a private figure); speech integral to criminal conduct, see, e.g., Giboney v. Empire Storage & Ice Co., 336 U. S. 490 (1949); so-called “fighting words,” see Chaplinsky v. New Hampshire, 315 U. S. 568 (1942); child pornography, see New York v. Ferber, 458 U. S. 747 (1982); fraud, see Virginia Bd. of Pharmacy v. Virginia Citizens Consumer Council, Inc., 425 U. S. 748, 771 (1976); true threats, see Watts v. United States, 394 U. S. 705 (1969) (per curiam); and speech presenting some grave and imminent threat the government has the power to prevent, see Near v. Minnesota ex rel. Olson, 283 U. S. 697, 716 (1931), although a restriction under the last category is most difficult to sustain, see New York Times Co. v. United States, 403 U. S. 713 (1971) (per curiam). These categories have a historical foundation in the Court’s free speech tradition. The vast realm of free speech and thought always protected in our tradition can still thrive, and even be furthered, by adherence to those categories and rules.

Absent from those few categories where the law allows content-based regulation of speech is any general excep-

Jim, there is no way tagging a journalist after that thread and saying "you probably shouldn't do this" could be construed as anything friendly. My goal for you, as I've said before, is for you and your group to do better. Accountability and transparency are key here.

It's Twitter Joe. You constantly try to hold up your publishing standards against my TL. It's just a straight up purposeful category error. Please stop.

Joe Ondrak @TheOndrakGuy · Apr 21

So do you think that claims made on Twitter that involve individuals on here should be held to less rigorous standards than if they were published elsewhere?

Jim Stewartson, Antifascist, #RIPQ 🇺🇸 🇸🇰 @jimstewartson · Apr 21

Yes, Joe. There are different standards for publishing in academic journals, newspapers or other professional publications vs TWITTER.

Why is this so confusing?

Joe Ondrak @TheOndrakGuy · Apr 21

So your claims on Twitter should not be considered as significant or truthful as those made in journals or professional publications?

Jim Stewartson, Antifascist, #RIPQ 🇺🇸 🇸🇰 @jimstewartson · Apr 21

No, Joe. They should not. And neither should yours.
It's a different medium. Attacking TWEETS as if they are PUBLISHED WORK is just dumb trolling and you know it.

Joe Ondrak @TheOndrakGuy · Apr 21

So given that most of your claims are made via Twitter and Medium, you should not have a problem with them being considered lesser work or of a lower quality and people talking about that fact.

Black lawmakers and leaders in Detroit have announced they are suing the Michigan Independent Citizens Redistricting Commission over the newly-adopted state legislative maps. They claim the maps dilute African Misinformation thrives on social media where anyone can share almost anything they choose, and attention spans are short. Here's a quick guide to help you understand what misinformation is and how to recognize it.

Misinfo

Why do people share misinformation?

Many people share misinformation unknowingly and sometimes with good or altruistic intentions — whether to articulate their perspectives, warn others away from danger or join others in trying to make sense of the world around them.

But some research suggests that some people also knowingly share things they suspect are false — whether to damage “the other side” in a political debate, get social media likes and shares, or conform to their ideological identities.

Why Cloth Masks Might Not Be Enough as Omicron Spreads

Time it takes to transmit an infectious dose of Covid-19

		PERSON NOT INFECTED
		Nothing	Cloth mask
PERSON INFECTED IS WEARING	Nothing	15 min.	20 min.
	Cloth mask	20 min.	27 min.
	Surgical mask	30 min.	40 min.

I'm not sure what a "public health point of sale view" means, but vaccines existed for a long time before we really focused on their ability to reduce transmission. Many do reduce transmission, partly or (almost) fully. Plenty don't. <https://t.co/JmG7yOQcse>

When I wrote about COVID vaccines Dec 2020, ability to reduce asymptomatic transmission was key unanswered question. Efficacy was determined based on reduction of disease. Later found that they reduced spread well w/alpha, less so w/delta & then omicron. <https://t.co/TNgNnQUzT2>

Next-Gen vaccines that reduce transmission of SARS-CoV-2 would be great, especially if that protection lasts. But that's not how they are tested & something we repeatedly noted would be unsure as they were under development.

I'll also add that as I've noted before, I'm writing a book on the development of early pertussis vaccines and zero discussion of transmission reduction at that time. That didn't get examined until much later.

Actually the primary purpose of a vaccine is to prevent disease. Neither the Salk (inactivated) nor the Sabin (live attenuated) polio vaccines produce sterilizing immunity. They both are very effective at preventing the disease paralytic poliomyelitis, not poliovirus infection. <https://t.co/Km2smLCiuW> @KassandraSeven People don't like change. They survived up until this point without covering mouths and noses. They don't understand why this is an issue now. The truth is it's always been an issue we have ignored. They want the vaccine to magically put us back to the way things were before.

AT THE SECOND SESSION

Begun and held at the City of Washington on Friday, the third day of January, two thousand and twenty

An Act

To amend the Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act to allow the Administrator of the Federal Emergency Management Agency to provide capitalization grants to States to establish revolving funds to provide hazard mitigation assistance to reduce risks from disasters and natural hazards and other related environmental harm.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

How well does Steve Hassan know QAnon and what role is he playing in the Thinkin Project?

A number of people I have spoken to about the Thinkin Project have called the group "dangerous" because of the lack of transparency. How do you respond to the accusation?

Recent leaks from your Discord server show a list of people on a "controlled opposition" list. Why was this done?

Jan Bobrowicz (@janbobrowicz)

Jim Stewartson, who founded The Thinkin Project, is a TERRIBLE victim of his own paranoia. VICE are making a series “about what, if anything can be done about [...] conspiracy theories”, and asked Jim to contribute. Jim thinks VICE are “literally waging a war” on him personally.

Stewartson publishes a DM he received from VICE producer Vegas Tenold. Jim claims this is to trap him into answering “gotcha questions” that are connected to Fred Brennan, who successfully campaigned to take down 8chan, which Brennan created, to combat the QAnon conspiracy theory

Vegas Tenold

Mr. Stewartson. Apologies for jumping like this. My name is Vegas Tenold, producer with VICE News. We are on a documentary series about what be done about the conspiracy theories have large parts of the nation in touch talking to therapists, psychiatrists, others, and we'd love to get your someone who has tailor made his QAnon. I'm aware that Vice has the past, but we'd like to give you

Once they get them to the interview, they ask about me and @projectthinkin and ask gotcha questions based on Fred's trolling.

Can you give me some details about the current status of the Thinkin Project, how many people are involved, how many people you have helped?

Can you give me some details about exactly how you are helping people?

I noticed that the name of person who organized the GoFundMe has changed. Can you say why that is?

Is the Thinkin Project a non-profit? If not, how is it structured?

@DoYouHaveData @XposingXtremism @coolfacejane I might as well point out that the image that Stewartson is using shows less than half of the tweets from last week which included kassandrseven. Not that this makes any difference. His edited chart and the full chart are equally irrelevant to the claims he's making.

But it was a beginning. (@DoYouHaveData)

@jimstewartson I did and have. This is not what hoaxy shows. It is in the FAQ on their page.

<https://t.co/o09Hjgkdo9> It only shows if a term is passed from one account to the next. If you bring up a term, everyone who interacts with you on that term (good or bad) will show up as a node.

What does the visualization show?

Hoaxy visualizes two aspects of the spread of claims and fact checking: temporal trends and diffusion networks. The user can zoom in on any time interval. Diffusion networks display a Twitter account and two nodes are connected if a link to a story is passed between those two accounts. A connection indicates the type of information: claims and fact checks. Clicking on an edge reveals claims shared by the corresponding user. The network may be pruned for performance.

Misinformation

Misinformation thrives on social media where anyone can share almost anything they choose, and attention spans are short. Here's a quick guide to help you understand what misinformation is and how to recognize it.

Why do people share misinformation?

Many people share misinformation unknowingly and sometimes with good or altruistic intentions — whether to articulate their perspectives, warn others away from danger or join others in trying to make sense of the world around them.

But some research suggests that some people also knowingly share things they suspect are false — whether to damage “the other side” in a political debate, get social media likes and shares, or conform to their ideological identities.

Bad actors — such as hyperpartisans, trolls and even foreign agents — create and share disinformation to cause division and confusion, to promote political interests and points of view or for financial gain.

Mis- and disinformation are fundamentally exploitative in nature, often targeting our most deeply held values and beliefs to elicit a strong emotional reaction that overrides our more rational thought processes.

Watch out! While the emotions most often elicited by mis- and disinformation are fear, anger and outrage, more agreeable emotions like curiosity and hope are also used to bypass our cognitive defenses.

Misinformation:

Information that is misleading, erroneous or false. Misinformation is generally shared — and sometimes created — by people who are unaware that it's inaccurate. This is the best term to use when the intent of the creator or sharer is unknown.

VERSUS

Disinformation:

A subset of misinformation that is deliberately created or shared with the intention to misinform and mislead others, usually to achieve a desired ideological, political or financial result.

Remember: The intent behind the creation or amplification of false information is often impossible to determine.

Types

Adapted from First Draft's seven types of mis- and disinformation, created by Claire Wente

Misinformation can be categorized based on what makes it false or misleading. The following five types are commonly found online:

False context

An image, video, quote or other piece of content is presented in a new, false context that changes its meaning.

Imposter content

Content — such as a fake tweet from a public figure, or a fake ad — that falsely uses a well-known name, brand or logo to fool people into believing that it is authentic.

Fabricated content

Misinformation that is entirely made up, such as computer-generated imagery or entirely fictional reports presented as “news.”

Stolen satire

A specific type of “false context” misinformation in which all or part of a piece of satire is presented as authentic.

Manipulated content

Photos, videos, graphics and other types of content that have been “doctored” in some way, such as having one or more elements artificially added or removed.

Red flags

WATCH OUT

If you see these common misinformation and “rumor cues,” proceed with caution.

Phrases

- “Let that sink in”
- “The media won’t report this”
- “Make this go viral”
- “Do your own research”
- “There are no coincidences”

Patterns

- Manipulated text on signs or t-shirts
- Doctored “amazing” nature or space photos
- Photos of protests and crowds
- Screenshots of articles with no links

Your best defenses

1. Checking out unfamiliar people and accounts
2. Glancing through social media replies that call a post into question
3. A quick internet search using keywords to find a questionable post

I think we should go back to basics and make sure more people understand what actual evidence for a claim looks like so they're less likely to be fooled by manipulative people. Problem is, I don't know how to teach someone that.

@KassandraSeven I think one overlooked approach that grifters, disinfo peddlers, and their followers have to evidence is, for lack of a better term, McCarthyism. Find a suspected enemy to focus on, point out and question all their "connections", and voilà, you have uncovered a member of "them".

@KassandraSeven This approach assumes a vast, real or imagined, conspriacy. It then assumes everyone is in on it, and consequently requires as little evidence as two people being aware of each other, or having sat next to each other to prove the claim.

Analysis of Competing Hypotheses <https://t.co/Geb197pC3Q> <https://t.co/RGhuVmMXTk>

^ Process

Heuer outlines the ACH process in considerable detail in Intelligence Analysis.^[1] It consists of the following steps:

1. Hypothesis – The first step of the process is to develop a hypothesis, preferably using a group of analysts with diverse backgrounds and perspectives. The process discourages the use of a single hypothesis and using evidence to prove it right. Instead, the process encourages the development of multiple hypotheses when all possible hypotheses are considered.
2. Evidence – The analyst then lists evidence (both direct and logical deductions) for and against each hypothesis.
3. Diagnostics – Using a matrix, the analyst evaluates the evidence in an attempt to disprove as many theories as possible. The matrix has a greater "diagnosticity" than other evidence, and is used for judging the relative likelihood of alternative hypotheses. This is the most important, according to Heuer. Instead of looking for evidence ("working down" the matrix), the analyst looks for a piece of evidence at a time and examines it for its diagnosticity.

1. SARS-CoV-2 is an American-created recombinant bat vaccine, or its precursor virus. It was created by an EcoHealth Alliance program at the Wuhan Institute of Virology (WIV), as suggested by the reporting surrounding the lab leak hypothesis. The details of this program have been concealed since the pandemic began. These details can be found in the EcoHealth Alliance proposal response to the DARPA PREEMPT program Broad Agency Announcement (BAA) HR0011850017, dated March 2018¹ - a document not yet publicly disclosed.

The contents of the proposed program are extremely detailed. Peter Daszak lays out step-by-step what the organization intends to do by phase and by location. The primary scientists involved, their roles, and their institutions are indicated. The funding plan for the WIV work is its own document. The reasons why nonpharmaceutical interventions like masks and medical countermeasures like the mRNA vaccines do not work well can be extrapolated from the details. The reasons why the early treatment @TheOndrakGuy I mean, there was nuanced debate on Twitter about the pros and cons of counter-protesting, but it's fair to say that Jim Stewartson does stand out from most users by issuing direct orders in all caps.

Listen here please.

If you are “antifa”, “anti-fascist”, or just really hate nazis and want to punch them in the face, DO NOT UNDER ANY CIRCUMSTANCES GO TO DC ON 1/6.

If you do, they will USE you to create more fascism. They WANT you there. YOU are the plan. DO NOT ENGAGE.

I am super conflicted about the "don't go to Washington to counterprotest" thing.

Giving the PBs & militias the fight they want is potentially bad.

Letting them have the streets of the Capitol without a fight is potentially bad.

The thing I'm most surprised about my current situation is this: the number of women on twitter who are ready to enable a man who threatens another woman with frivolous legal action to silence her while also lying his ass off about her.

As an example of the smears against him, Stewartson mentions "a whole thread about how I'm a misogynist", which he denies: ♀ a misogynist is the last thing I am ♀ I spend a huge amount time exposing misogyny ♀ All of my best friends are women ♀ WTF

For example, there's a whole thread about how I'm a misogynist. I am the last thing I am. There are people in that thread who have actively and happily supported. T

I spend a huge amount of my time exposing misogyny to women. I have never, ever abused women. All of my best friends are women. Tell me there's a misogynist. I will tell you. WTF.

Please help

There is an absolutely brutal smear campaign against me now. I need some help to get my accounts back.

For example, there's a whole thread about me being a pedophile. The last thing I am. There are people in that thread who I have actively and happily supported. They are not.

I spend a huge amount of my time exposing abusive men and women. I have never, ever abused women. If you know me you will tell you. WTF.

It is INCREDIBLE that I have to even say this. Stop engaging in defamation. Stop.

This operation to tear me apart needs to stop. I can do my work and defend myself. The operation is wrong.

That unfounded allegation, which he started, and has never substantiated, persists today. "So... regardless of what happens with my fucking Twitter account..." Stewartson seems resigned to the finality of this suspension, for which the podcast does not reveal the reason. <https://t.co/ZzpcD945rM>

Look, I know you got sent by a few of trolls who really don't like me, but you are not doing a good job:

- 1) I linked the Wapo article in my piece dipshit
- 2) The spike was a single news story and then DIED DOWN. Not famous.
- 3) Starting 8/16 he has had CONTINUOUS attention. FAMOUS.

Jim Stewartson claims his post on Medium "led to Jim Watkins getting famous" in Aug 2020.

The Washington Post profiled Watkins in Sep 2019, after Congress subpoenaed him to appear before the House Homeland Security Committee, following shootings in NZ, CA, and TX.
